“ALL THAT I HAVE TO SAY ABOUT FERGUSON, I WROTE IN A SEPARATE STATEMENT I PREPARED AS PART OF A 1967 REPORT BY THE CIVIL RIGHTS COMMISSION...”

“The worsening crisis in our cities is essentially a human crisis. This is a truth we tend to forget because the crisis is so often expressed in abstractions –dwindling tax revenues, housing trends, unemployment rates, statistics on air pollution, or crime and delinquency. Even in this report, which deals with a most fundamental aspect of our current urban dilemma – the crisis in public education –we have had to describe what has been happening in terms of achievement scores, graphs and figures. But it must never be forgotten that what we really have been looking at is the brutal and unnecessary damage to human lives.”

Brian R. Owens
THE SCULPTOR

Brian R. Owens - Owens belongs to a small fraternity of artists who use classical techniques to depict contemporary subject matter. Within this is an even smaller group: Artists that have won highly competitive grants, scholarships and commissions - both public and private. And within this, a still smaller group: Artists that can both sculpt and paint. From Michigan to Florida; from applied scientist to sculptor; Owens has made an improbable journey into the world of art and the continent of his soul. Owens is known as a sculptor who works mostly on a commission basis. But a closer look reveals his range as a visual artist, including works in oil, acrylic, pastel and pencil.

"Art is not something I do, it's who I am", said Owens. "I didn't choose to be an artist, it chose me. William H. Gass predicted my own feelings when he said that people like myself are here to add to the world's objects and ideas those delineations, carvings and symphonic spells as ought to already be there. To make things whose purpose is contemplation and appreciation."
